

The City's SOCIAL LIFE

Events, Gayeties and Personal Activities of the Week

There have been several delightful innovations introduced in card parties recently, says a writer in the Baltimore American. Fertile minds have succeeded in furnishing but few entirely new games, but the old ones have been charged with a trifle in some cases and novelties added to them. Whist, euchre, clinch, Pedro, high five, hearts and many other games have been improved upon and a few new games added, known as "63" and "500," and a new one of hearts and clinch, played in duplicate fashion, similar to duplicate whist, with trysts, has been added to the already long list of means for providing enjoyment during the long winter evenings. Numerous contrivances are now employed by hosts and hostesses to entertain their guests. The different popular authors and poets have been brought into play—there are Dickens card parties, Shakespeare card parties, de Quincey card parties, April fool, fancy dress, spy, heart, historical, Jack Frost, lawn or picnic, patriotic, military and photograph card parties, each one alike, in that all are played with cards whose faces are alike, but different in particular, because of the backs or cards, the decorations of the room, the prevailing flower and the general effect of the surroundings. A combination affair, part card party, which may be made laughable and interesting is the "grand party." A different game is played at each table, namely, grand at the first table, hearts at the second, whist at the third and so on through the list of games. One or more tables at the foot are called the "dolly tables." At the latter various laughable games are introduced, such as old maid or Jack straws. Or the guests at one table may be given needle and thread, a piece of cloth and supply of buttons. The couple sewing the most buttons on their piece of cloth progress—but the buttons must be sewed on so firmly that opponents cannot pull them off. The attempts at haste on the part of the gentlemen are sometimes very funny, especially when a gentleman mistakes the amount of sewing necessary and all his buttons are pulled off by his opponent.

Even in the making, coloring and fashioning of the cards new designs are to be seen. Cards with backs representing "Princesses at the spinning wheel," "Good night," "Moon fairy" and "Diana" are to be had, besides cards suitable to various kinds of parties. If a Holland party be given none but the "Dutch" designs may be used, if a lawn party, landscape ones; if a heart party, cupid backs. Some of the new designs this season from the English manufacturers are of the conventional set pattern style, but show some very beautiful color effects. In tally cards a pretty custom is to mount a photograph of the host on the men's cards and of the hostess on the women's cards, or a photograph of the corner of the room in which the games are played can be utilized. If the party be given in honor of a visitor or debutante, a photograph of the guest of honor is appropriate. A pretty idea is to paint flowers on the women's tally cards and write names of the flowers on those of the men. Each man then ascertains his partner by the picture on her card. Many devices have been invented to take the place of the tally card. A woven silk pouch may be used, into which small trinkets, small marbles, tiny sea shells, etc., may be deposited to indicate game won. A novel idea is suggested by the use of a bell, decorated with flowers and pendants from a bower. Two pages, prettily dressed, should be employed to toll the bell at the end of every round, thus taking the place of the harsh gong.

She Played for Money.

Two club women met in a street car the other day and their conversation turned on clubs and card parties. One of the women was just returning from a card party at a friend's house and she was commenting about the people she met, some of whom she had never met before. One woman who happened to be her partner was a total stranger to her and from her conversation during the afternoon it is not unlikely that they will always be strangers. This woman told the ladies at her table that she belonged to a club where the women play for money and she says it is so exciting that to come down to playing every-day cards, euchre and the like, is positively too slow for anything. She said she had heard from a friend that season that her husband has positively refused to pay her losses. She also said she had been to a champagne supper the night before and didn't have half enough. "All this sort of thing is all very well," said the woman who listened to her, "but I don't care to know such women and although this certain woman was all right and nice in general, yet I don't care to have her call on me."

Equal to the Occasion.

There is a story going about town just now concerning a man who writes to the Washington Post. He appeared at but one dinner party. There he sat next the young daughter of a noted naval officer. Her vocabulary is of a kind peculiar to very many young girls, but she rattled away at the famous man without a moment's hesitation. It was during a pause in the conversation that she said to him: "I'm awfully struck on Shakespeare. Don't you think he is terribly interesting?" "Yes," he said, "I think he is more than that. I think Shakespeare is just simply too cute for anything."

Arrangement of Flowers.

Turnell arises in the soul of the flower-lover when he or she sees some horrible arrangement of blossoms by a clumsy hand guided by an eye lost to lines of beauty. Bunches jammed into vases regardless of the natural tendencies of the flower are pathetic blots, instead of being lovely bits of color as they were intended to be. It is a safe rule to follow the natural growth and arrangement of the blossom before it is cut when trying to fix flowers in vases or bouquets. Flowers are preferable, because the long green stems show through, though a common brown board jar lends itself to loveliness if filled with riotous nasturtiums or autumn leaves and goldenrod. Geranium blooms are despised by most people as common. So they are cut with short stems and jammed down into a bowl until they look like a solid piece of red flame. If a geranium bloom is looked at, it will be seen each little flower is like an umbrella, and the pretty joining of blossom and stem should not be hidden. Put some loose leaves into a vase and stand the flowers up above the leaves sturdily. They are not the kind of flowers to trail around and must be upright. The change in their appearance will be wonderful. If arranging roses, let them droop and lean as much as they like, for that is the way they grow on the bush. If arranging pansies or little low flowers, a good idea is to lay maidenhair fern over the top of a flat bowl and stick the violets or pansies or pansies through this. In speaking of flowers, the shower bouquet has become very fashionable in the East, says a Boston paper. There is nothing known in florists' triumphs which retards or supplants the onward way of the shower bouquet.

bouquet. To make such a one more beautiful two kinds of flowers are employed. Neither one only, nor the bouquet of mixed flowers, nor that divided arbitrarily in thirds or quarters. One of the beauties carried at the assembly the other evening was of American Beauties mixed with lilies of the valley. This does not sound very pretty, as the roses are so large and the lilies of the valley are so small. But the effect is in good taste and the bouquet is a fell in a shower, tied with ribbon loops and knots, from the periphery of the bouquet.

White ribbons look best on the loops and ends of the shower bouquet, although other tints are often used to match the color of the lilies. The shower bouquet is certainly first favorite.

Transmogrified.

She thought her tresses far too dark. And straightaway bleached them tawny yellow. She tamed the piquant, winsome spark. In her bright eyes to fearful mellow. She'd long bewailed her five-foot four. And wished to be majestic, stately. High boot heels added one inch more. And she'd a graceful, graceful waist. She got a synthetic, graceful waist. Complexion masks and toilet paste. Abolished healthy tints debasing. She exercised, massaged, delated. Until in short—no mortal knows. Just how she looked before she started.

Wasson's The Climax of Bargain Giving. Wasson's

Three Days' Clearing Sale

A Tremendous Pre-Inventory Money-Saving Event.

WE EXPECT TO DO AS MUCH BUSINESS in the coming three days as in any usual six. From Monday morning until Wednesday night mighty efforts will be made to clear out every dollar's worth of merchandise that we do not care to inventory. To do this we have put on all such goods prices that are simply astonishing, and all in your favor. It is a climax of bargain giving—an event you must pay attention to.

To-Morrow's Great Bargains, Short Ends Silks

Those of you who attended the mighty sale of Silks last week must have thought the limit of bargain giving had been reached, but as remarkable as those splendid offerings were, to-morrow's bargains will surpass them. In the three days before inventory every inch of odds and ends, silk remnants and short lengths of beautiful and exclusive fabrics must be sold. Almost incredible price reductions here.

The Colored Silks

Another remarkable gathering of all short ends and remnants, all placed on the counters to-morrow and divided into three lots

LOT 1—All lengths from 1 to 2 yards, beautiful Silks, all new styles, worth up to 75c yard, go at..... 29c

LOT 2—Lengths from 2 1/2 to 3 1/2 yards, superb lines of silks that sold at $1.00, at..... 37c

Incredible Dress Goods Values Monday

Another of those almost sensational dress goods sales that seem not to consider cost and real values. The final sweep of every short end—remnants and small pieces of black and colored dress goods in our great stocks—all must be sold within the next 3 days, but at the prices they have been marked it is doubtful if they will last through Monday. Be an early buyer.

Colored Wool Goods

All gathered for quick moving, divided into three lots and priced lower than you've ever known them before.

Lot 1—Lengths from 1 1/2 to 5 1/2 yards, that were formerly 25c to 40c yard, may be had Monday at..... 12 1/2c

Lot 2—Any lengths of choice Dress Goods of from 2 1/2 to 6 yards, that were formerly sold at from 50c to 75c yard, go at..... 39c
